

Bring weed questions to Extension experts at Aug. 21 Farmers' Market

8/17/10 Contact: Toby Day (406) 994-6523 or toby.day@montana.edu
News-weeklies, News-local, MSU-All-News, News-internal

Summary: Extension specialists and Master Gardeners will have a booth at the Aug. 21 Gallatin Valley Farmers' Market to answer plant, insect, disease and gardening questions.

BOZEMAN - Montana State University Extension specialists and Master Gardeners will be at a booth at the Gallatin Valley Farmers' Market at the Gallatin County Fairgrounds Saturday, Aug. 21, to help answer questions about weeds, insects, diseases and other general yard and garden issues.

Jane Mangold, invasive plant specialist, Fabian Menalled, cropland weed specialist, and Melissa Graves, plant identification diagnostician, will be the guest specialists at the booth this Saturday. The topic for the week will be cropland, rangeland and yard and garden weeds.

The specialists and Master Gardeners will also provide fact sheets on related topics and free MontGuides, which are MSU Extension publications pertaining to yard and garden installation, plant selection, integrated pest management and other related topics.

Gardeners are also encouraged to bring plant and insect samples to the booth for diagnosis or identification, said Toby Day, Extension horticulturist and Master Gardener coordinator.

The Gallatin County Farmers' Market runs from 9 a.m. through noon on Saturdays through Sept. 11.

For more information about the MSU Extension and Master Gardener Farmers' Market booth, contact Day at (406) 994-6523 or toby.day@montana.edu

-CS-