A business degree with a management option is the most versatile option for students and can be applied to practically every industry and organization. This option provides you with the skills to manage and grow a profitable business as well as effectively interact with executives, employees, customers, suppliers, and other stakeholders.

Common career paths include general managers, operations managers, and project managers in both for-profit and not-for-profit organizations.

WHO HIRES MANAGEMENT GRADUATES?
Practically every business or organization has a need for a graduate with a business management background. Employers vary depending on the type of work that interests you. Main areas for entry-level jobs are found in retail, insurance, healthcare, wholesale, information technology, and non-profit industries.

ADDITIONAL CERTIFICATIONS:
- Project Management Professional (PMP): The PMP is described as the gold standard of project management certification. Recognized and demanded by organizations worldwide, the PMP validates your competence to perform in the role of a project manager, leading and directing projects and teams.
- Certified Associate in Project Management (CAPM): The CAPM certification demonstrates an understanding of the fundamental knowledge, terminology and processes of effective project management.
