Dr. Hannah Vander Zanden is an assistant professor in the Department of Biology and the Archie Carr Center for Sea Turtle Research at the University of Florida. Her work focuses on characterizing how species use and interact with their environments. She will present on the effects of wind and solar renewable energy facilities on bird populations, sea turtle migratory connectivity patterns, and potential foraging changes in sea turtles following the Deepwater Horizon oil spill.