

Savings Squirms

You would like to save your money for a down payment on a new truck. However, your spouse wants to save for new living room furniture.

How would you handle this situation?

Savings Squirms

You would like to be financially secure in retirement and since you have ten years until retirement you want to enroll in your company's 401K plan. But your spouse says the money should be used to pay for additional principle on the house.

How would you handle this situation?

Savings Squirms

You have a credit card balance of $2,560 with a 19.8% APR. You want to make only the minimum payment, but your spouse says to pay more.

How would you handle this situation?

Savings Squirms

You have a credit card balance of $2,560 with a 19.8% APR. You want to make only the minimum payment, but your spouse says to pay more.

How would you handle this situation?

Savings Squirms

You would like to save your money for a down payment on a new truck. However, your spouse wants to save for new living room furniture.

How would you handle this situation?

Savings Squirms

You would like to be financially secure in retirement and since you have ten years until retirement you want to enroll in your company's 401K plan. But your spouse says the money should be used to pay for additional principle on the house.

How would you handle this situation?