In recognition of the Net Generation and its particular and sometimes surprising ways of learning, the MSU Teaching & Learning Committee is pleased to invite you to the following luncheon workshop

“Father Google and Mother IM: Confessions of a Net Gen Learner” presented by

Carie Windham
Student Relations Specialist, EDUCAUSE Learning Initiative

The rise of the Millenials has spawned new conversations about engagement and learning on today’s college campuses. But what do these Net Gen learners really want? And what do they need to survive in a Web 2.0 world? From the mouth of a confessed Net junkie, learn what makes these students tick, what ticks them off, and what faculty and administrators need to know to bridge the generational divide.

Thursday, January 10, 2008
Room 103, Engineering Physical Sciences Building
Lunch served at 11:45 a.m.
Presentation 12:00-1:30 p.m.

(The presentation will be filmed and broadcast over the Internet for those faculty who are unable to attend)

Please RSVP to annea@montana.edu by January 8

CARIE WINDHAM is a graduate student and freelance writer based in Athens, Georgia. She is the featured speaker at the MSU College of Business Spring retreat. For a list of articles authored by Ms. Windham, go to her EDUCAUSE blog site (http://connect.educause.edu/user/Carie417/619) and open the Publications tab under My Community Content.

EDUCAUSE is a nonprofit association whose mission is to advance higher education by promoting the intelligent use of information technology.