Tips & Tools for Effective & Efficient Faculty Advising

This workshop will provide an opportunity to learn effective advising techniques from experienced faculty advisors, as well as to connect to resources that will aid in streamlining advising.

One goal of the session is to prepare faculty to use their advising appointment time to connect with students and enhance their advisees’ opportunities within their major, rather than just select classes for the next term.

About the panelists

- Laura Black, associate professor, College of Business
- Steve Holmgren, adjunct associate professor, Dept. of Chemistry & Biochemistry
- Abbie Richards, assistant professor, Dept. of Chemical & Biological Engineering

Representatives from the following offices/programs will be available with resources and to answer questions during the second half of the session: Student Success/Career Services; Registrar’s Office; Study Abroad/Office of International Programs; and Academic Advising Center/University Studies.
