Montana State University - Students of Concern Team

October 2011

Mission

The Students of Concern Team is a cross-functional team made of University officials with responsibility for discussing, assessing and responding to reports of individuals who demonstrate disruptive or concerning behavior on campus or in our local community.

Vision

Our work is dedicated to creating a safe and supportive campus environment that is conducive for learning, conducting research, and providing service.

Scope

A student of concern is any individual who demonstrates disruptive behavior, expresses personal difficulties, exhibits mental or emotional instability, or otherwise causes another member of the campus community to feel apprehension for their safety or for the safety of the student of concern.

The Students of Concern Team will meet regularly and share information (as allowed by law) about reports made to their office/departments about students of concern. This group will help develop strategies to provide interventions and additional resources for students of concern that will be beneficial to both the student of concern and the campus community.

Any information shared during Students of Concern Team meetings will be strictly confidential.
