The Soviet Union: Rise, Fall and Aftermath

This class tells the story of the rise, fall, and aftermath of the Soviet Union. Created as a revolutionary experiment in the wake of the destruction of the First World War, the USSR constituted a “great experiment” which changed the shape of the twentieth century. In this class, we will look mostly at political, economic, and cultural developments taking place in the USSR and post-Soviet space from 1917 to the present day.

Course Objectives

Obtain a general understanding of the major developments and events relating to the USSR and the post-Soviet World from 1917 to the present day
Develop an understanding of historical periodization, particularly with respect to “the Cold War” and “post-Cold War” world.
Develop comparative skills, particularly with respect to the place of the USSR and post-Soviet World within the global community
Develop thematic skills, especially with regard to issues like cross-cultural interaction, the role of institutions, and cultural/civilizational identity.
Develop technical skills, especially writing, and skills related to the field of history.

Class Consciousness

I think it’s very important for a class to ‘gel’ properly. I therefore outlaw various activities which I think help to kill a good vibe: coming late, eating, falling asleep, using any kind of electronic device, or other types of behavior that isn’t focused on making the class better.

Lectures, Readings

My lectures are meant to complement the readings, not supplant them. Students are expected to have completed the assigned readings prior to class. The lectures will make more sense if you are at least familiar with the readings due for that day. Usually, I will give you a couple of rather broad questions to keep in mind while doing the next week’s reading.

Discussions and Groupwork

There is a lot of class discussion. Sometimes I put students in a circle, sometimes in groups. I like to move people around, and force people to discuss their ideas with one another face-to-face.

Plagiarism and Cheating

Plagiarism or cheating will result in a report to the provost’s office and will likely involve both failing the assignment and the class. See MSU code of conduct here.
