

Cynthia Bejarano

Dr. Bejarano is an Associate Professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces, NM. Her publications and research interests focus on border violence, youth cultures, immigration issues, and gender violence at the U.S.-Mexico border.

She is the author of the book Qué Onda? Urban Youth Cultures and Border Identity, which is based on four years of ethnographic work in an urban Southwestern high school. Most recently, she is the co-editor of an interdisciplinary anthology with Rosa-Linda Fregoso entitled Terrorizing Women: A Cartography of Femicide in the Américas.

She is the principal investigator for a multi-million dollar, federally and state funded program, which assists the children of farm workers seeking to attend college.

“Dispelling Myths and Confirming Realities:
Living with Violence at the U.S. and Mexico Border”

Wednesday, April 4, 2012
4:10 to 5:45 PM

101 Gaines Hall, Montana State University

For more information, please contact Bridget Kevane at umlbk@montana.edu or 994-6448

Sponsored by the Department of Modern Languages and Literatures and the College of Letters and Science

MONTANA
STATE UNIVERSITY

College of
LETTERS
& SCIENCE