A significant portion of the campus's expenses relates to employee compensation and benefits ($120.4 million, or 58%), primarily in the instruction, research, auxiliary and academic support areas. This relationship is expected to continue, and the proportion may grow as compensation, insurance and other payroll-related costs increase. Although currently small in comparison with total expenses, utility costs are volatile and may fluctuate.