For FALL 2019

A Unique INTERDISCIPLINARY Special Topics Class

UNIV 491: Tomorrow, Today, and 19,000 Yesterdays

3 credits
CRN 25374
Tuesday and Thursday 16:30 – 17:45
Norm Asbjornson Hall Room 165

Prerequisite: Junior Standing or permission. Students from ALL MAJORS are WELCOME.

Brought to you by an interdisciplinary faculty team of superior instructors from all over the MSU campus

Many current trends, issues and challenges in culture, politics, and science find historic threads dating back 50 years to the late 1960s. Charting our uncertain way forward can be informed by understanding the environmental movement, civil rights protests, the Cold War, space exploration, political party alignment and even the emergence of rock and roll. This special interdisciplinary course involves discussion, writing, independent research, and a culminating interdisciplinary project.

Don’t miss your chance for an innovative, challenging, and inspiring educational experience!

Questions? Contact the course coordinator: Prof. Rob Maher rmaher@montana.edu