Graduate Women in Science and Engineering
Seminar Series Presents:
“Making a career out of failures (and a few successes)”
By Christine Verhille

Tuesday, May 1st
11:30 - 12:30 pm
Byker Auditorium
Refreshments starting at 11:15 am

Christine Verhille is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Ecology here at MSU. However, since completing her undergraduate degree in kinesiology, she has explored career paths like teaching English as a second language, public service, private consulting, and veterinary medicine. At one point, not long ago, she was pretty sure the only remaining career her Ph.D. and post-doctoral research experience qualified her for was as a Starbucks Barista. She will share some of her experiences, but most importantly what she has learned about taking steps to establish a career and coping with the stresses of uncertainty, failure, and success during those steps.

Are you a female graduate student and interested in joining WISE? Contact us at msu.wise@gmail.com or visit us at montana.edu/wise