Information for Applicants

Academic Program

New Zealand follows a Southern Hemisphere academic year, beginning in February and ending in November. It is divided into 2 semesters, with a mid-year Winter break in June/July. Most faculties offer a mid-year intake so it is possible to enroll in the February – June or the July – November semesters, as well as the year long program.

Canterbury

Canterbury is a medium-sized university where 12,600 students choose from over 100 different subjects in 7 faculties: Arts, Science, Law, Engineering, Commerce, Forestry, Music & Fine Arts. More than 2,000 international students represent 75 countries.

The University of Canterbury has been ranked number one as one of the top two universities for research in a national survey conducted in 2004. You are required to enroll for a full time programme of study appropriate to your length of stay. This normally consists of 3 to 4 courses for a single semester.

Waikato

Over 2,500 of Waikato’s 14,000 students are international, from an extremely diverse variety of countries, particularly the Pacific Rim and Asia.

Waikato is a comprehensive university, offering many different majors across seven distinct fields of Study. In a worldwide research ranking completed in 2004, the University of Waikato was ranked No.5 amongst New Zealand universities for such subject as Acoustics and Music, Psychology, International Business, Human Resources, Applied Mathematics, Computer Science, Communications and Media Studies, Molecular and Cellular Biology, and Chemistry.
